History

First released in 1986, the Gold American Eagle coin has become one of the most popular bullion coins in the world since the implementation of the "Gold Bullion Act of 1985". The coin's front features the Statue of Liberty as depicted in the famous $20 gold piece between 1907-1933. The reverse depicts a family of bald eagles and includes "United States Of America", its weight in ounces and its legal tender value of $50.

Production: U.S. Mint

Produced by the United States Mint, this coin is made up of .9167 (91.67%) gold and is the only bullion coin whose weight, content and purity are guaranteed by the United States Government. Created using gold mined in the United States, it's currently one of the world's leading gold bullion investment coins. This tender undergoes a specialized minting process, which begins by manually feeding burnished coin blanks into presses. The gold is then melted and repeatedly struck so that the images seem to float above a mirror like field on both the front and back side of the coin. Due to this, the American Eagle Gold Bullion Coin is one of the most sought after coins in the world.
