WHAT IS CRYPTO?

Cryptocurrencies are digital currencies that use cryptography for security. Bitcoin and Ether, two types of cryptocurrencies, aren't issued and maintained by any central authority or government. Instead, they're facilitated on a public database called a Blockchain. Records on a Blockchain are validated and encrypted for every account and transaction made. Similar to gas prices, Bitcoin and Ether can change a lot over time as supply and demand go up and down.

MANAGING CRYPTO

When you buy cryptocurrency at a CXI branch, you will receive it on a Cycle card. This secure hardware is your crypto wallet and allows you to pay merchants accepting crypto. With an NFC-enabled phone, you can verify your balance and extract your assets if you want to move them to another wallet. Treat your Cycle card like cash. If the card is lost or destroyed, access to your funds is gone.

Download the Cycle Wallet app to check your balance or extract your digital assets.
